

There are no translations available.

SPMage is an international contest that selects the most beautiful images from the nanoworld. These atomic scale images of particles and matter are made with Scanning Probe Microscopes. These tools have enabled scientists to lead ahead in research. SPMage aims to recognise the importance of such contributions that have led to many initiatives within the world of Nanoscience and Nanotechnology.

On their website, there is a gallery with amazing images from previous editions of the contest.